

Do Knot Miss This Jewelry Statement

We are constantly keeping our eyes open for the latest and greatest in jewelry styles and trends. This season, the knot is dominating the style scene, especially when it comes to statement necklaces and bracelets. Finding new ways to wear current pieces is always a challenge, but you might just be able to re-work what you already have to pull off this look.

The knotted necklaces can be quite bold or more feminine, depending on your goal. If you have a long necklace of beads or pearls, then you can easily create a knot down the front, or off to the side. Right down, asymmetrical designs are really hot and there are some fabulous pieces available. Multi-strand chain link necklaces with knots or buckles are all the rage and can be worn alone or with other pieces. For a daintier look, try a lariat style necklace. This means that the necklace does not connect with a clasp. Instead, it is knotted or tied. Alternatively, an Algerian love knot pendant necklace in sterling silver is great choice. This celeb favorite symbolizes joy, health and wealth and makes a great everyday accessory or a gift for a friend or loved one.

Knotted bracelets and cuffs are at the top of the 'must have' list this year. They are a bit edgier than a standard cuff bracelet and are an expressive way to wear the bold jewelry trend. For daytime, try sterling silver, while nighttime looks call for Cubic Zirconia rhinestones.

If you really love this trend, then consider knotted jewelry sets. You can easily wear the clip earrings and necklace together, and mix the bracelet with different accessories for another outfit. These pieces are fun and add something a little bit different to your look. Don't be afraid to wear several shades of metal woven together if you are looking to really grab attention.
